Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Hill-Side and Border Sketches: With Legends of the Cheviots and the Lammermuir I Am one of those persons who hold the exploded opinion that Great Britain - Ireland, of course, excepted - is the only country in Europe for a gentleman to reside in permanently. With all its faults I love it - and never waste a thought on the eternal encroachments upon English liberty, as said and sung over half-and-half by the tailors of Tooley Street. I disbelieve that patriotism and a begging-box can be things co-existent - I have the gift of sleep, a discretion -, and, if in my transits to Brighton or Harrowgate, I should be unhappily cooped up in a railway carriage with a radical, on the first emission of a Jeremiade against military punishment and the abuses of the State, I recline my head comfortably in the corner, and for the remainder of the journey take mine ease. I have been through life a wanderer - and inns have been my abiding places. With West-end hostelries I am familiar...
