REFORM OF U.S. INTERNATIONAL TAXATION: ALTERNATIVES

Createspace. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 28 pages. Dimensions: 11.0in. x 8.5in. x 0.1in. A striking feature of the modern U. S. economy is its growing opennessits increased integration with the rest of the world. The attention of tax policymakers has recently been focused on the growing participation of U. S. firms in the international economy and the increased pressure that engagement places on the U. S. system for taxing overseas business. Is the current U. S. tax system for taxing U. S. international business the appropriate one for the modern era of globalized business operations, or should its basic structure be reformed The current U. S. system for taxing international business is a hybrid. In part the system is based on a residence principle, applying U. S. taxes on a worldwide basis to U. S. firms while granting foreign tax credits to alleviate double taxation. The system, however, also permits U. S. firms to defer foreign-source income indefinitelya feature that approaches a territorial tax jurisdiction. In keeping with its mixed structure, the system produces a patchwork of economic effects that depend on the location of foreign investment and the circumstances of the firm. Broadly, the system poses a tax incentive to invest in countries with low-tax rates of their own and a disincentive to invest in high-tax countries. In theory, U. S. investment should be skewed towards low-tax countries and away from high-tax locations. Evaluations of the current tax system vary, and so do prescriptions for reform. According to traditional economic analysis, world economic welfare is maximized by a system that applies the same tax burden to prospective (marginal) foreign and domestic investment so that taxes do not distort investment decisions. Such a system possesses capital export neutrality, and could be accomplished by worldwide...
